and N. Main and that was that. John Klimkiewicz was at the meeting and made a videotape report. To get to the meeting, he walked from Simpson. At the end of the meeting, he walked back to Simpson. At the meeting I told my colleagues about my conversation with Frank Greco, Jr., on the subject of flags for Main Street. I made the call at noon when John was here. The flags cost $11.00 and are purchased at Sean -- where Greco works (489-8674). No meeting took place, it is very important to note, in Memorial Park -- in front of the Civil War statue. We got folding chairs from 301 and arranged them in a circle. It was a lovely summer night and there was a lovely breeze. Many passer-by took note of the meeting going on. Very good -- a park such as Memorial Park is an ideal place for a meeting, particularly of an organization such as the Historical Society.

A very amusing appellation was created sometime during the course of the day -- just when, I'm not exactly sure at the moment. I think it was after I talked with John about working in Maplewood. He said something to the effect that he would be very busy. We were both in a playful/sarcastic mood and so I said to him -- "Look at it this way, it's good training for sainthood. Perhaps you can become the next Christian martyr." We laughed. I then added: "I can see it now. Your face carved <sup>in stone</sup> over Cathedral doors all over the world. You'll have to adopt a new name. There are enough Saint Johns already. Let's see -- you can be Saint Nilrev." We both laughed heartily. John then got into the spirit of the game and added -- "Saint Nilrev -- the dreadful or maybe Saint Nilrev -- the mean." Again we laughed. John's middle name is Verlin which, spelled backwards, is Nilrev.
